

COMMUNITY PUBLIC HEALTH TEAMS

WE IMAGINE A CONNECTED COMMUNITY WHERE EVERYONE CAN ACCESS RESOURCES THEY NEED TO LIVE HEALTHIER LIVES.

Community Public Health Teams are a partnership with the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health, local community-based organizations, and healthcare providers that connect residents to health and community support programs, education, mental health support, food resources, and more.

Our teams visit homes in their service areas and connect residents directly to free services. This pilot project has been launched in 10 high-priority communities within LA County.

HOW WE WORK

Community Public Health Teams close the gap between health services and the people who need them. We visit each household at least once a year and follow up after our first visit. We connect community members to health care and community support programs.

In addition to visiting homes in the service areas to bring resources directly to residents, Community Public Health Teams host community meetings where residents tell us about their health priorities. Each CPHT has an Advisory Board to ensure our actions align with the community's priorities. We want to work with you and your neighbors to improve community health.

WHAT TO EXPECT

HOME VISIT

Contact us to schedule a home visit. At this visit, Community Health Workers will conduct a household assessment and offer to connect you to health and social services.

COMMUNITY MEETINGS

You'll be invited to join community meetings where you can see health data for your community, share your views on priority health issues, and take part in making a community action plan.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Want to help put community action plans into action? You can also join the CPHT Advisory Committee, which meets more frequently to carry out and monitor the action plan.
